ANDREWS IN OFFICE.

The New Street-Cleaning Commissioner Receives Congratulations.

He is Blissfully Ignorant as to His Parties from England and Paris Congress meets. New Duties.

Says He Thinks He Would Rather Not Have Been Appointed.

William S. Andrews, the new Commissloner of the Department of Street-Cleaning, formally took charge of his office in the Stewart Building this morning. He took his seat at the desk formerly occupied by Commissioner Brennan, which was adorned with a floral horseshoe sent by his late asso ciates in the Excise Board.

There were also several letters and elegrams of congratulation, and a number of friends were waiting to shake hands with him and wish him with that enthusiasm expected in a beginner.

"I don't know whether I should receive congratulation or condolence," was his reply to Capt, Whalen, "and I don't know whether I would not have rather remained where I was."

Mr. Andrews admits that he does not know the first thing about street-cleaning or Street-Cleaning Department affairs. He does not say so, but It clear that he accepted the appointment to succeed Brennan without the slightest inquiry into the requirements of the
